Message from Jane Grant, Chief Executive

Once again our major incident response was tested this weekend when a bus was involved in an accident on the Clydeside Expressway, injuring a number of people.

As the on-call Corporate Director for the day, I was able to see first-hand how well our services responded to the incident and I wish to express my thanks to all the staff on duty last night, and also to those of you who volunteered to come in for duty on a day's leave to support your colleagues and our patients.

The casualties were admitted to four of our hospitals, and thanks go to all the staff on duty within the emergency departments of the Queen Elizabeth University Hospital, the Royal Alexandra Hospital, Glasgow Royal Infirmary and the Royal Hospital for Children.

Thanks must also go to the behind the scenes team including our radiology staff, our facilities staff, and our hospital co-ordinators who played a vital role in ensuring the patients were seen, treated and admitted or discharged quickly.
