

Vaginal bleeding in early pregnancy

If you have vaginal bleeding with or without pain it should be investigated. This may involve getting bloods taken or an Ultra Sound Scan. It can be very difficult in early pregnancy to know if a pregnancy is continuing or not and may require more than one visit to EPAS. The following information should help you to understand how we can use growth, blood tests and US Scans during your assessment.

