90 Minute Leadership

OD recognise the challenges our leaders have in managing time constraints and setting aside time for development activities. Short, intensive development sessions can be a useful way of learning. Rather than spending a full day covering a relatively wide range of topics, our “90 Minute” leadership sessions will focus on specific topics, concentrating on key issues rather than the broader picture.

The next session is:

“Understanding Our Drivers – Beliefs that get in the way of effectiveness”

The effects of values and beliefs on our leadership behaviour is a growing field of research. And it’s a bit more complicated than one would think at first glance. The link between values, drivers and leadership behaviour is explicit in most leadership activity and organisations.

What a leader believes about people, the organisation, or herself/himself affects what he or she does. Therefore, understanding oneself is considered by some leadership experts to be an important part of leadership development and becoming a better leader.

Sandra Wilson explores the connectivity between our personal drivers and our effectiveness as leaders with a chance for you to reflect personally on your drivers during this session. Sandra’s successful consultancy experience is in working with large organisations. Specialising in the systemic introduction of coaching, coach training, and executive coaching, she works with individuals and teams to promote change, increase competence and improve performance in the workplace. She has a wide and diverse client base in both the public and private sectors and she works both nationally and internationally.
