

Core brief

Friday, 31 May 2019

Introduction

This issue brings your news about new concussion guidance and an equality, diversity and human rights learnpro module.

New concussion guidance

The Royal Hospital for Children have developed a new resource for children, young people and families to use to help guide them through the symptoms of concussion after a head injury.

The guidance which lets parents know when their child can return to normal activities after a knock to the head is being circulated to staff across the organisation and is available on the Hot Topic section of StaffNet. Click here to read a press release issued today.

Equality, Diversity and Human Rights - Statutory Mandatory Module

Mainstreaming equality and human rights practice into daily routines and more strategic planning is at the heart of NHSGGC business. It starts with fundamental compliance – an understanding of what legislation expects of us all and how we comply – and extends to wider inequality sensitivity and cultural challenge (and change) and the huge benefits accrued from making measured advances to the way we work.

The statutory and mandatory Equality and Human Rights e-learning module introduces staff to the Equality Act (2010) and the Human Rights Act (1998) and sets out, through detailed case studies and questions, practice we should all adopt or adapt to make sure our work in the public sector can provide the best services for those who need them most.

Statutory Mandatory training modules can be accessed by logging on to LearnPro at: <https://nhs.learnprouk.com>

Are your contact details up-to-date? Click here to check